LIKE PEASANTS.

The Pastor Talked as if the Royal Couple Were Such.

The Hague Dispatch, 7th.

The bridal couple took chairs facing the Predikant, Dr. van der Flier, the court pastor. The reigning Prince of Meoklenburg-Schwerin and the Queen mother sat on the right of the bride. Queen Emma wore lilac panne, opening over a cream colored skirt.

To the left of the bridegroom were his mother and Grand Duke Vladimir of Russia. As soon as the party were seated the Predikant offered a prayer, after which the choir sang.

The pastor, who is a spare man of severe appearance, made a ten-minute address to the young couple, which was remarkable for its simple austerity. He exhorted them on the duties of the marriage relation in the same language he would have used in addressing a peasant bride and bridegroom. He emphasized a wife's duty to her husband as the head of the household. The brief religious formula of the Dutch Church followed.

The Predikant having received the record of the civil marriage addressed the couple, saying:

"Do you wish and intend to live together in matrimony according to God's word and law, and do you wish, therefore, the blessing of the church on your union?"

The bride and groom responded clearly: "Yes."

The Predikant—If that is your wish your faith must be in the Lord and Creator of heaven and earth. Take, therefore, each other's right hand and promise the following:

"Do you, Henry, promise her whom you have taken for your wife never to leave her; to love and cherish her as a faithful, God-fearing husband; to live a godly life, keeping faith with her in everything, according to the Gospel?

"Do you, Wilhelmina, promise to obey and serve and assist him whom you have taken for your lawful husband; never to leave him; to live a godly life, keeping faith with him in everything, according to the Gospel?"

Both replied "Yes."

Both knelt while the Predikant read the prayer at the conclusion of the service, the ending of which is almost identical with the words of the Universal Protestant service: "Those whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

Upon conclusion of the ceremony the choir sang a paean of good wishes invoking blessings upon the union, and the audience afterward sang Psalm CXIII. Then the benediction was pronounced.

MRS. NATION

She is Not Under the Direction of the W. C. T. U.

To the Editor of The Telegram:

The career of Mrs. Nation during the past several weeks is unique. While it is outside our province or inclination to pass judgment upon her, there is no doubt that the woman is at least very sincere. Her raid against the saloon, as many probably know, is not under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, either State or National. This organization of earnest Christian women does not sanction or approve such radical methods of overthrowing evil and injustice.

Some periodicals have stated that the Christian Temperance Union offered Mrs. Nation a medal. This organization is a men's temperance society in Kansas, and is in no way affiliated with the Womans' Christian Temperance Union.

It is hoped that the sensation wrought by Mrs. Nation may be overruled for the good of the temperance cause not only in Kansas but elsewhere.

To be Married.

Correspondence of The Telegram.

Mr. John L. Hooper thought he would fool us, but it has leaked out that he and Miss Carrie Wynova Garves are to be married at the home of the bride's parents, near Pomona, Tuesday, February 26, at 10:30 a. m.

Miss Garves is a daughther of Mr and Mrs. H. A. Garves, and is a young lady of great personal charm. Mr. Hooper is a young man of great promise in the business world, and is now with the Lindley Store Company, Pomona.

MILITIA GUARDED THE JAIL.

ASHEVILLE ROBBERS ARE THREATENED BY MOB.

Governor Aycock Orders Out Militia Which Stood Guard Last Night—Discription of the Bold Robbery and Gallant Defence.

Late yesterday afternoon Governor Aycock received a telegram from Sheriff Lee of Buncombe, asking that the two military companies of Asheville be ordered out to assist him in preventing the lynching of two white men and two negroes who on last Friday night robbed the postoffice at Emma, that county, and shot, perhaps fatally, Assistant Postmaster Alexander, who pluckily defended the office, and shot two of the robbers. It was stated last night that there would be no chance of saving the robbers from lynching if Mr. Alexander died. Mr. Alexander, who was very popular in West Asheville and was to have been married today. Owing to his critical condition the ceremony was performed Sunday. Governor Aycock sent the following telegram late yesterday afternoon:

"To R. F. Lee, sheriff, Asheville, N.C.

"I have ordered the two military companies to report to you immediately to aid you in securing order. Omit no effort to keep the peace. Wire when you receive this and keep me posted."

Judge Shaw, who is holding court in Asheville, ordered the Sheriff to summons every possible man to guard the prisoners. The militia, with about 80 members, and a posse of citizens guarded the jail last night.

The Asheville Citizen gives the following account of the robbery:

"The robbery occurred about nine o'clock. The postoffice is in D. J. McCellan's store and Samuel Alexander, the clerk, had just closed the store when a call came from the outside that some person, a peculiar name being given, wanted some groceries. Mr. Alexander unbarred the door, when a masked man stepped in, covering him with his pistol, telling him he meant business and for him to obey orders.

"Another masked man came in and the pair directed Mr. Alexander to go to his room. They found his revolver there, and then told him to unlock the postoffice. He did not have the key and told them it would do no good anyway, for there was nothing there.

"The robbers then demanded that he unlock the safe. He said he didn't know the combination, whereupon one of the robbers drew a knife and threatened to cut his throat. Mr. Alexander then opened the safe and Johnson put his revolver down and began to take the money from the safe while Foster kept Mr. Alexander covered.

"A cat made a noise in the rear of the store and Foster's attention was drawn to it. Mr. Alexander, quick as a flash, saw his opportunity. He caught up the revolver lying on the desk and shot Foster, the bullet entering the left side, just below the heart.

"Mr. Alexander attempted to shoot Johnson, but his revolver snapped and Johnson grappled with him. In the scuffle Foster fired and the shot struck Mr. Alexander in the left thigh. Mr. Alexander then fired again and struck Johnson in the shoulder, the ball ranging upward, leaving the shoulder and entering the jaw, passing entirely through and was taken out of the other jaw this morning. It is a 44-calibre bullet, the same size as the one Mr. Alexander was shot with, which was found in the store this morning. Mr. Alexander has only a flesh wound.

"The struggle continued and Mr. Alexander, despite his loss of blood, overpowered both his assailants and dragged them to the door. He unbarred the door and dragged them onto the porch. They managed then to escape with the aid of their accomplices, and Mr. Alexander fell, too weak to stand longer.

"The robbers fired a parting shot, but it went wild. Mr. Alexander then gave the Odd Fellows' signal of distress, which aroused Mr. McLellan, although the shooting had failed to do so. When helped to his feet Mr. Alexander was able to walk.

"The uninjured men hurried to town and tried to get a hack. The hackmen thought some one was trying to hold them up and at 10:15 two messages were received at the city hall that someone was attempting to hold up everybody on Depot street.

"About 11 o'clock the message came from Emma telling of the trouble and and immediately the police force started out for the robbers. Captain Jordan and Patrolmen Collins and Taylor traced the men to Scratch Ankle by the tracks the hack made in the mud. The white men were captured in one house and the negroes in another. No resistance was made and just before 3 o'clock the quartette were lodged in jail. Medical attention was secured and the bullet taken out of Johnson's jaw. The bullet in Foster has not yet been found.

"Between $10 and $20 was secured by the robbers, all except $9 being in small change. Nickels and dimes to the amount of $3.25 were found on Foster and $1.40 on Johnson. A slip 'due the drawer' was found on Johnson, which is easily identified.

"A steel bit, a dirk, several knives, one 44 calibre Smith & Wesson revolver, one 38-calibre American Bulldog and a 32-calibre revolver; a razor and a large bunch of skeleton keys were found on the prisoners.

"The men were removed to the county jail about 10:30 Saturday morning. The uninjured men were brought out first and taken to the jail, then the wounded were taken on stretchers to the jail."

The Right Sort of Man.

Under the above caption, after speaking of the action of Mr. Brice, of South Carolina in immediately resigning his position as an attorney of a railroad on being elected to the State Senate, the News and Observer pays this just tribute to Maj. Chas. M. Stedman of Greensboro:

"This conduct on the part of Mr. Brice is 'a specimen of the old Roman integrity that all honest men admire.' We recall a similar action on the part of a prominent North Carolinan. When Hon. Chas. M. Stedman was elected Lieutenant Governor, he was attorney for three leading railroad systems. Although his salary as Lieutenant Governor averaged only $125 per year, he immediately resigned the attorneyship of all these systems. He took the same course pursued by Mr. Brice, and declined to let himself be placed in a position where his devotion to the State might conflict with his duty to his clients.

"There is need of more Roman virtue of this sort."

Military.

Capt. Z. B Vance, of Charlotte, spent the afternoon in the city examining applicants for enlistment at the recruiting station here.

* * *

Mr. John W. Vaughn, a recently discharged private from company G 27th Volunteers, reenlisted today at the Greensboro recruiting station for service in engineer corps in the Philippines.

* * *

The worn and weather stained flag which for so long a time marked the recruiting office in this city, hanging from the window of the office in the S. L. and T. building, was replaced this morning by a new and handsome one.

A Dearth of Printers.

Greensboro is suffering a printer's famine. Nearly all the offices are short badly and it's a pretty tough scrimmage with some. The Telegram's force is off nearly one-half.

We make this statement in orrder that our subscribers may understand if the paper is occasionally late, and also if there is a temporary shortness of matter. We expect shortly to be in better condition than ever for getting out the paper, and we know our readers will, with that generosity and kindness which has ever characterized their dealings with the paper, bear a little.

WORK OF THE LEGISLATURE.

A QUIET DAY IN THE HOUSE AND THE SENATE

The Governor Hears No Further News From Asheville — Divorce Bill Special Order—Companies Lose License if They Remove Cases to Federal Courts.

Special Dispatch to The Telegram.

Raleigh, February 12—The Governor has received no news from Asheville since the telegram came stating that sixty-eight soldiers had reported for duty at the jail.

A bill was introduced in the Senate for the removal of the present State arsenal, and the erection of a new one with a hall of records above.

The House passed the Senate bill striking out the insurance companies from the provisions of the Craig law and revoking the license of any company which transfers cases from State to Federal courts.

The divorce bill was made the special order of the Senate for Friday.

Two amendments were offered, one granting a divorce for three years' abandonment and the other allowing divorce in case a husband commits rape.

A bill passed the house authorizing the governor to pay the expenses of defending state officers indicted in Federal courts. The Democratic caucus last night unanimously endorsed the bill. It covers the cases of the election officers.

McLean's bill allowing the penitentiary to manufacture fertilizer was discussed at great length, but failed to pass, ayes 38, noes 48.

5 and 10 Cent Store to Reopen.

Mr. A. F. Girkin announces that he has purchased the five and ten cent store which has been closed here for two or three weeks, and will open it up for business Thursday morning of this week. He says that there are abont $6,000 worth of goods, and that he will continue to run the store but entirely independent of any others. Mr. Girkin has been in the store as assistant manager. The bids for the stock were sealed. He and Mr. Reid, the manager, both bid, and his being the higher, he received the stock.

Mr. Scott Much Improved.

Mr. J. W. Scott is much improved. His mind has become clear and his appetite is good. With continued favorable condition he will soon be up. He ate a beefsteak this morning with great relish.

One of the wealthiest land proprietors near Smolenski, in Russia, died a few months ago, and after the funeral his heirs and attorneys began to look for his will. They fancied that this task would be merely perfunctory and that the document would be found among the other family papers, but, much to their surprise, they were unable to find the slightest trace of it. Every room and article of furniture in the house was then carefully searched, but the result was the same, and the only conclusion at which the heirs could arrive was either that no will had ever been made or that if one had been made it was destroyed before their kinsman's death, says a London exchange.

The missing document, however, was found a few days ago and in the strangest place imaginable. A young man was rambling through the house, and, happening to see a graphophone on a table in the library, he examined it to see if it was in working order, and finding that it was he put a record in it, which he supposed was that of some popular Russian song. What was his amazement, however, when instead of a song he heard the dead man's voice slowly recite the words of the missing will!

The heirs were promptly notified of this discovery and they lost no time in carefully examining the record containing the will. It was found to be flawless, and the question then arose whether such a will would be deemed valid by the courts or not. This question is now being discussed in the supreme court at St. Petersburg and the case is interesting all lawyers who have heard of it. Many think that the will will be pronounced entirely valid, and if so it may become a common practice for persons to use graphophones for the purpose of making their wills.

FULL IDENTIFICATION.

Mr. Williams Steals Miss winchester's Purse, Which is Recovered.

Mr. Alfred Williams, colored, sah, this morning rests in the county's home for citizens needing reform. Yesterday he drove Cunningham Bros.' coal wagon and breathed the air of freedom. His present plight is the result of the unerring recollection of Emma Winchester, a sable goddess who cooks for Mr. D. L. Hagin. Yesterday Alfred carried a load of coal to Mr. Hagin's house. When he left he carried Emma's purse. This was no ordinary purse; so he got into deep trouble, and likewise into the hands of the police.

Emma made complaint when she found that her purse was gone, and the way she described it was a marvel. There was, she said, a dollar bill, folded exactly four times; a silver dollar, a fifty cent piece, a big copper cent piece dated 1837; and a little button with "ticket" stamped on one side and "Norfolk Street Railway Company" on the other. When Williams was arrested the pocketbook was found on his person with the contents exactly as Emma had described them.

Death of Mrs. C. E. Thomas.

After a lingering illness of several weeks Mrs. C. E. Thomas died at her home on East Market street this morning at an early hour. Although the weeks of her sickness could not be counted on the fingers of one's hand, and her sufferings at times were very severe, she made no manner of complaint at her afflictions and bore them with Christian fortitude.

The burial will take place tomorrow and the interment will be in Greene Hill cemetery. Mrs. Thomas leaves three small children, one of them an infant.

She was a daughter of Mr. Watlington, who lives in Washington township, this county.

At the Academy Tonight.

The Globe Democrat of St. Louis has this to say of Miss Bernice Castello who appears at the Academy of Music this evening under the auspices of the Knights of Pythias:

"A large audience greeted Miss Bernice Castello at Centenary Methodist Church last night. The young lady is a carefully trained impersonator, though apparently quite young. She imitated the voices of a man, a woman and a child and also sang, accompanying herself on the violin in one recitation, 'The Song That Reached His Heart.' Her humorous readings were happily rendered, and as a closing piece she gave in a most pathetic manner an impersonation from 'Damon and Pythias.'"

The Work of a Greensboro Artist.

The frontispiece in the December number of Man's Best Friend, a magazine published in New York and devoted to dogs and the sport they afford, is from a drawing by Mr. W. B. Tallman of this city. The picture represents a sportsman in high grass with gun in readiness to shoot, and immediately in front of him, but concealed from his right by the grass, a pickaninny is standing, while in the background his negro mammy is calling to him, "keep yer head down sonny."

Deaths in January.

In the city during the month of January there were six deaths of white people and eight of blacks. Bad weather is hard on the colored population and pneumonia among them is frequent. Last month there were three deaths from this cause among them, while there was only one from the same cause among whites. Two of the deaths were caused from old age.

Social.

Miss Bertha Mebane this afternoon entertains the Social Card Club.

The Bachelor Girls will be entertained Thursday afternoon by Miss Mabel Hill.

Hunting.

Mr. Theodore Sturgis, of New York, and Mr. John White, of Thomasville, returned yesterday from a hunt over Mr. Sturgis' preserve, near Pleasant Garden. They left on the night trains for their respective homes.

SHOW OF LIVE STOCK.

BIG EXHIBIT FOR THE PAN-AMERICAN AT BUFFALO.

Horse Show a Prominent Feature. Model Dairy Building on the Grounds—Accommodations For 25,000 Animals—Great Display of Agricultural Products.

The exhibit of live stock at the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo the coming summer will include all varieties and breeds of domestic animals. Arrangements have been made to accommodate 25,000 animals on the grounds. Liberal prizes in all classes will be offered.

A fashionable horse show will be a prominent feature of the display and will include harness horses, saddlers, jumpers, etc. This exhibition will be fashioned on the lines of the Madison Square Garden show and will be held at the Stadium.

A model exhibition dairy, composed of all breeds of milk cows, will be in operation during the six months of the Exposition.

A great display of the varied agricultural products from the various states, provinces and countries of the Western Hemisphere will be made in the Agricultural building, covering two acres.

Awards for all meritorious exhibits will be made direct to individual exhibitors.

The closing of the Nineteenth century has witnessed marvelous strides in the improvement of methods in the dairy world. Formerly the whole business was conducted largely by "rule of thumb." Instead of a vocation requiring a certain apprenticeship it is fast becoming an exact science, in which chemistry and bacteriology play no insignificant part. The increasing interest and attendance at the various dairy schools throughout the United States and Canada, the existence of great cooperative and commercial organizations for the manufacture and sale of dairy products, is an undisputable testimony to the achievements of modern science. In this great industry the government has appropriated vast sums of money to help the dairyman in his work, and this is indicative of its importance as a factor of the great food problem of the world.

The territorial lines of the dairy belt have long since been annihilated. A few states and provinces in the east no longer enjoy the exclusive distinction of being in the dairy sections. In the Dairy building at the Exposition space has already been asked for by Maine and California, Manitoba and Texas. The supposed disdvantages of soil, water, climate and food in portions of North America have largely been eliminated by the skillful dairyman, and today splendid representatives of dairy animals are found wherever the wholesomeness and nutritive value of milk products are known.

Few people have any adequate conception of the present magnitude of the dairy industry. In the United States and Canada there is one dairy cow to every four persons, or 20,000,000 cows. The annual milk production is estimated at $550,000,000. Add to this the value of dairy cows, $650,000,000, and we have $1,200,000,000. To this add the investments in dairy appliances, and we reach a grand total of $2,000,000,000 invested in this great industry in the United States and Canada. The great countries to the south of us, Central and South America, are eager for American dairy products, and with more people from these countries visiting the Exposition in 1901 than have visited the United States and Canada in the past half century the great commercial opportunity to exhibitors of Dairy Products and Supplies needs no further comment.

A large, beautiful building located near the Agricultural building will be devoted exclusively to Dairy Products and Dairy Apparatus.

All the milk products will be exhibited in glass cases properly refrigerated for the purpose of maintaining as far as possible the texture and quality of the products on exhibition. Exhibitors whose products form a portion of their state or provincial displays will not be charged for exhibit space, but individual exhibitors will be charged $1.50 per square foot for space occupied.

The exhibit of Dairy Appliances will embody all the recent inventions and improvements made in this industry, including sterilizers, pasteurizers, separators, coolers, churns, etc.

Electric power will be furnished in the building should exhibitors desire to demonstrate the work of their machines for the benefit of the visitors.

The exhibit in the Dairy division will be a selective one and in point of attractiveness, interest and utility will surpass anything ever before attempted.

A Model Dairy, composed of representatives of all the breeds, will be in operation during the entire Exposition for the purpose of determining as far as possible the cost of production and the adaptability of certain breeds to special lines of dairy work. These several divisions are in charge of Mr. F. A. Converse.

EXPOSITION SCULPTURE.

Pan-American Has the Best Ever Seen at a Show.

In its sculptural adornment, as well as in several other respects, the Pan-American Exposition will far surpass any enterprise of the kind ever held. There are over 125 splendid original groups, and they are to be used around the Court of Fountains, the Esplanade and the Electric Tower. They will symbolize the purposes of the buildings and exhibits and bring out the poetry in what to many may seem exceedingly prosaic things.

After crossing the Triumphal Bridge, which is the grand formal entrance to the main court and is itself to be decorated with splendid statuary, one will see to the right and left, at opposite ends of the Esplanade, the fountains and the sunken gardens in front of the United States Government and Horticulture buildings respectively.

The Fountain of Man, by Charles Grafly, is the central fountain at the east of the Esplanade, and it is flanked by the Fountain of Prometheus and the Fountain of Hercules. The subjects of other fountains in this group will be the Savage Age, the Despotic Age and the Age of Enlightenment. At the other end of the Esplanade the Fountain of Nature, by George T. Brewster, is the most elaborate sculptural adornment, and the idea of this fountain is amplified in minor ones, such as the Fountain of Kronos, Fountain of Ceres and the groups typifying Mineral Wealth, Animal Wealth, etc. These symbolic ideas will be worked out in beautiful forms in other parts of the main court and in connection with the Electric Tower and other buildings, the whole forming a most complete and harmonious expression of the purposes of a great Exposition, such as the Pan-American.

Exposition Postoffice.

The United States government postoffice department will occupy a larger space at the Pan-American Exposition than was ever before devoted to it at an exposition. The methods of mail transportation will be fully illustrated, and a postoffice equipped with all the latest devices used in the larger postoffices in the United States will be a feature of the exhibit.

IN RUSKIN COLONY

Georgia Colony Wherein Living Costs But Little.

System by Which the Expense of Sustaining Life Is Reduced to a Minimum—The Bill of Fare.

What is the lowest possible daily cost of food for an adult man in the United States? This is a question that is receiving a great deal of attention from scholars and economists throughout the land. President Harper, of the University of Chicago, is of the opinion that three square meals a day can be had at the cost of 15 cents. It may be well to note, however, that the eminent gentleman has not sufficient faith in his theory to put it to a practical test. Many students are discussing the subject, and advance some beautiful theories. Prof. Harrison, of the University of Pennsylvania, reports that the students of that institution are well fed at a cost of 5 cents a day a head. William A. Morse, of Chicago, says he has been living on one dollar a week for the last five years, which is just 14 2-7 cents a day. Edward Atkinson has theoretically demonstrated that, with scientific cooking, ten persons can be served a good meal at five cents a head, or 15 cents a day, says the Savannah (Ga.) News.

While these people have been theorizing the Ruskinites have demonstrated by actual experience the lowest possible daily cost for food for their entire community. This cost is so low as to be almost beyond belief. Before proceeding further, I will state that the Ruskinites are socialists, living six miles southwest of Waycross. The colony settled at Duke, in Ware county, just one year ago, and numbers upward of 300 souls. They believe firmly in the doctrine that society should be reorganized by regulating property, industry, and the sources of livelihood. They also believe in a community of property and the negation of individual rights in that property.

The colonists have given much time and study to economic questions, and have solved the riddle how to live at the lowest cost. When forced to leave their Tennessee home the colonists were hard pushed, but they possessed stout hearts and willing hands, and today are on a fair road to prosperity. They live, and live well, at an actual cost per capita of less than ten cents a day.

Everything they consume is bought by wholesale in large quantities, and is cooked in the community kitchen. In the community dining-room tables are set for 30 people. Those who do not wish to eat with the crowd are given the privilege of purchasing company stores and cooking it at home. When vegetables are scarce these people are allowed seven cents per capita a day; that is, seven cents for each person, big, little, old, young, sick or well. When vegetables are plentiful the cash allowance is only five cents. As the community raises its own vegetables the approximation cost is only about two cents per capita a day, making the actual cost of living at Ruskin from seven to nine cents a day for each man, woman and child.

Let us go into the community dining-room and see how they live. We go at the invitation of Prof. Denny, an eminent socialist speaker and scholar. In a large room, 20 feet wide and 150 feet long, we see nearly 300 men, women and children seated at long tables. Breakfast is our first meal. It is well prepared, savory, and daintily served. We make a wholesome meal on light bread furnished by the colony baker, butter, Georgia sirup, oatmeal, Irish potatoes, milk, cereal coffee and sugar. Sometimes we have fried mush, with fruits and jellies.

Our dinner generally varies according to the season. Meat only comes to the table twice a week. The bill of fare usually consists of rice or peas, beans or macaroni, some two or more of these; Georgia's rup, beefs, tomatoes, egg plants, potatoes, soup, bread and cereal coffee—cereal coffee is made by the colonists, as one of their main industries.

For supper, cheese in some form, lemonade, cake, rice or beans, sugar, grits, mush, fried potatoes, cold tea and bread. The person visiting Ruskin and taking his meals in the community dining-room will have the above bill of fare placed before him, with slight variations. He will find that it is not only possible, but practicable, for people to live at a cost of from seven to nine cents a day per capita. It is not merely existing, but the meals are wholesome, satisfying and well prepared. Of course, there are no little delicacies, except for the sick. There is no wine, simply a meal that will "stick to the ribs," and possessing sufficient nutrition to enable the people to do the hardest kind of work. As will be noticed, the colonists only get meat twice a week. They will do better on this line after awhile, when they get a start at stock raising, and then the per capita will probably be reduced to even less than seven cents a day.

Cheese Fritters.

Put one cupful of water, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one quarter teaspoonful salt and a pinch of cayenne in a saucepan over the fire. When the water boils, add one and one quarter cupfuls flour and stir until the mixture leaves the sides of the pan, then take off, cover closely and set aside to cool. Then beat in, one at a time, three eggs, using only part of the last egg. When the batter is right it will hold its shape without spreading. Stir in one-half cupful of grated cheese and set aside for a half hour. Drop by tablespoonfuls into smoking fat and cook until golden brown.—Home Magazine.

ROCKING THE BOYS TO SLEEP.

I sit me down in the twilight cool
Of a busy summer's day,
And close my eyes, and live again
The time so far away,
When Eddie and James and John were here;
And the tears to my eyes will creep,
For I seem to sit in the old brown chair,
A-rockin' the boys to sleep.

I bring John back from a home of wealth,
Where fame and honor dwell,
And sing and rock him to sleep once more,
More happy than tongue can tell.
I brave the storms on a shoreless sea
Where tempest and surges sweep,
And James is here and I rock again
"My wandering boy" to sleep.

I build a stair to the heavens tall,
And reach in its sweet domain
For little Eddie and bring him back
To my lonely home again;
My throbbing heart is heavy now
With a yearning strong and deep,
As I smooth the curls of my only babe
And rock him once more to sleep.

They say the old chair is useless now,
'Tis creaking, and dull with age,
And must be forever put aside,
Like a well-learned, worn-out page.
But the old brown chair sings a song to me,
As it whispers of other years,
And it tells of the roughened places smoothed,
And murmurs of childish tears.

Yes, the old chair tells in an undertone,
In a voice so creaking and old,
Of the comfort it gave through summer's heat,
As well as in winter's cold;
How these little dependent lives were soothed
Through their childish sorrows deep,
As it did its best to ease each pain,
While rocking the boys to sleep.
—Gertrude M. Hoag, in the Telescope.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 12

JIM.

So High Point comes up with an invention of perpetual motion. We do not know who the gentlemen is that our correspondent wrote about so glowingly yesterday, but we wish him good luck. All others of the several hundred inventors of perpetual motion we have known never had any good luck at all. None of them were ever able to interest enough sordid capital to perfect their inventions, and with the pride of genius, they refused to make known their discoveries for nothing, and so their secrets died with them. We fear that it will ever be thus.

The last inventor of perpetual motion whom we knew died before his time. Of course he would have died some time with his discovery uncommunicated, but it would not have come so soon, we verily believe, had he stuck to perpetual motion, instead of taking up with flying machines, as he did. This good and great man lived down in Union county and bore the modest name of Jim. He was a half-breed Indian, with straight black hair, which he greased with scrupulous care. He was not fierce and wild as his half forefathers, but slow and tame with a far away look which marked him as a genius-stamped man. Jim was a dreamer, and as became men whom fortune had so favored, he disdained the common, workaday affairs of providing food and raiment. His wife looked after these things and found compensation in her admiration for him. Jim didn't exactly die young, but he died before his time. Death came from a too sudden change of the current of his thoughts. He worked some forty years on perpetual motion and invented several different kinds of the article, but like the others, he could not get his marchines on the market. He finally became disgusted with the stubbornheadness of this world and quit trying. Then for his own satisfaction alone he continued to develop his ideas for their own sake, and he invented twenty-three distinct varieties of "never-ending still beginning," motion. But on an unlucky day, for some unknown cause, Jim suddenly took up flying machines, why we have never been able to understand. But certain it is is that it was a fatal step. His mind had dwelt for forty-odd years on balls and wheels chasing each other in unfaltering speed, and when he changed so suddenly to wings and pumps, the wrench was too great for even disappointed genius, and he at once began to waste away, and finally died. Though he succeeded in inventing only one flying machine that was very successful, as he may be said to have gone to heaven on it. In the lonely hours of the night we often weep for Jim—and the others of our friends who have tried to live too far in advance of their time.

Played Mrs. Nation.

Nelson Hamrick, son of the chief of police at Forest City, N. C., was shot and instantly killed in Dick Bailey's barber shop Saturday. His brother, Ezzell Hamrick was fatally shot. The Hamrick boys attempted to smash the shop, after the style of Mrs. Nation, while Bailey was shaving a customer. Bailey laid down his razor and picking up his pistol used it with the result stated. The Hamricks come of a good family. Bailey said he had to shoot them in self-defense.

Admiral Blake Among the Pirates

A Page from the History of Tunis.

By David Ker.

"THERE," said my French companion, pointing southward over the smooth, bright water, as we glided into the Bay of Tunis under the splendor of the African sunrise—"there is the place where a battle was fought which you Englishmen ought all to know by heart."

"Admiral Blake's attack on Goletta, you mean?"

"Just so. Yonder, where that sandbank juts out, stood the five forts that defended the place, and the pirate ships were moored just behind them, in that little bay. Not much sign of all that now, is there?"

Indeed it was not easy to call up any thought of battle amid the untroubled stillness and repose of that glorious landscape. Far along the eastern sky the great purple mountains stood out in endless range, crowned with the two-peaked summit of the mighty Hamet-El-Lif.

Through the deep, narrow gorges that cleft the huge mountain-wall every here and there the first rays of sunrise were just streaming across the vast expanse of blue, sparkling sea that stretched away to the north far as the eye could reach, with a few tiny white sails dotted over it like wreaths of foam.

Along the western shore of the bay extended a line of low, green hills, upon the crest of which a mass of crumbling masonry marked the spot where the ancient citadel of Carthage had fallen before Scipio and his Romans.

Just at the nearer extremity of the broad yellow sand-bar that spanned the whole breadth of the deep blue bay nestled the dainty little town of Goletta, and on the opposite hillside lay, like a drift of snow, the countless white houses, and crumbling walls, and tall minarets, and clustering palm trees of imperial Tunis.

But despite the perfect peace of the spot which once witnessed the finest battle fought there since the fall of Carthage, the memory of that day's work will never die while one man of Anglo-Saxon blood remains to keep alive the instinct of courage and fair play, and standing up against the strong in behalf of the weak.

It is well worth while for anyone, however he may hate war and bloodshed in general, to look back and see what was done here on a certain fine spring morning, two centuries ago.

It is the 3d of April, 1653, and the whole city of Tunis is in an uproar. Wild faces, livid with fear or black with rage, crowd the narrow, winding, gloomy streets, which echo with the clamor of countless tongues, the tramp of feet, the clatter of horse-hoofs and the rumble of artillery-wheels.

Hundreds of swarthy figures, sword in belt and match-lock on shoulder, are swarming over the decks of the nine huge war-galleys which lie moored close under the forts of Goletta.

In the forts themselves crowds of men are hard at work running out heavy guns, piling up cannon-balls, filling powder-chests, or laying sandbags along the ramparts as an additional shelter; and all eyes are turned watchfully toward the entrance of the bay, and the five great line-of-battle ships that are gliding into it, with the black mouths of loaded cannon gaping hungrily through their open ports, and the red cross of England—not yet altered into the union jack—fluttered jauntily at the mizzen.

High on the poop of the English flagship stands a tall, handsome man, in the uniform of a British admiral. His fine face is perfectly calm, but a close observer would notice that he wears the same set, stern look that it wore when he held Tauntontown years ago, against the bravest of Charles I.'s cavaliers.

In truth a hard fight against overwhelming odds is nothing new to Robert Blake, the worthy forerunner of Rodney and Nelson; and the cause in which he is to fight to-day might well nerve any man to do his best. Yonder, behind those batteries that frown upon him from behind the shore, are thousands of Christian captives—many of them Englishmen like himself—chained, ragged, half-starved, blistered by the scorching sun, and seamed with the scars of whip and branding iron. And now, after years of hideous bondage among brutal pirates, which have made the memory of home and friends, and the hope of one day returning to them, seem dim and distant as half-forgotten dreams, their weary eyes see once more the waving of English flags over a fleet coming to their rescue.

Well may the haggard faces brighten, despite the curses and blows of their savage taskmasters. When Admiral Blake came here three weeks ago with a demand for the "surrender of all Christian captives," and sailed away again with no answer save an insolent defiance from the bey of Tunis and his pirate chiefs, there was many a heavy heart among the prisoners. But to day he is here again, no longer to threaten, but to do; and the message which he brings this time is one which Tunis will long remember.

"Don't thee be troubled, lad," says one of the admiral's crew to a curly-haired boy who is looking wistfully toward the shore. "We'll get thy father out of their claws yet, never fear!"

The boys face glows at the words, and there is fight in his clear blue eyes which shows that if fighting is to be done to-day he will not be hindmost.

Ten weary years have passed since stout Tom Jackson, struggling for life on a dismasted wreck, was seized by these pitiless rovers; and the son, who was a child of five when he disappeared, had come back as a boy of 15, to take part in his rescue.

Onward come the great floating castles, in a grim silence which awes the fierce Arabs in spite of themselves. Suddenly there comes a rattle and a splash, as all five ships cast anchor at once. Then a boat is seen gliding shoreward from the admiral's vessel with a flag of truce to give the over-confident pirates one last chance to surrender before it is too late.

But instantly there comes a puff of white smoke from the nearest port, and heavy shot splashing up the water close to the boat's bow, showing what an answer the message of mercy has to expect.

Then Blake's face is seen to darken ominously, and with his wonted tug of repressed anger at the point of his long, black whiskers, he gives the word to open fire. Then up through the still air rises the stern cadence of the old Puritan battle-psalm, to the sound of which Cromwell's Ironsides had swept the best of the royalist soldiers from many a hard-fought field.

"God is our refuge and our strength,
In straits a present aid;
Therefore, although the earth be moved,
We will not be afraid.

"Though hills amid the sea be cast,
Though waters roaring make
And troubled be; yea, though the hills
By swelling seas do shake."

Instantly sea and shore and sky were wrapped in one thick gust of hot, stifling smoke, while the warlike music was drowned by the roar of 500 cannon.

Fire, smoke, yells, groans, curses, pelting shot, crashing timbers, falling stones, deafening cannon-thunder, all at once.

Far away in the desert the wandering Arab stopped to listen to the dull booming of the distant cannonade, and trembled as he heard it.

Men with powder-blackened faces fired at random into the cloud of sulphurous smoke that veiled alike ships and forts, broken only by the sudden flashes that brought death along with them. Masts and yards came crashing down on one side, stones and mortar on the other; and still the smoke billowed, and still the cannon roared.

But although the Arabs fought as fiercely as men could do, the dogged, unslackening steadiness of the English fire at length began to tell.

The fort which had fired upon the flag of truce was fast crumbling into a shapeless ruin. Five guns had been dismounted in the second fort, and three more were standing idle, with all their gunners lying dead around them.

In vain the Tunisians yelled and fired and struggled and shook their swords at the death-dealing ships, and lashed their prisoners forward to repair the shattered breastwork. Slowly but surely the battle was going against them more and more.

Suddenly a curl of smoke was seen to rise from one of the pirate's galleys. The Arabs rushed like madmen to quench the fire, but in vain. The smoke reddened into flame, while fresh spouts of fire broke from galley after galley, till the while pirate fleet was one red and roaring blaze.

Then the enemy began to lose heart altogether. As their fire slackened, that of the British redoubled, and the cheers of the sturdy blue-jackets were heard, even through the thunder of the bombardment.

"Hurrah for old England!" shouted a gray-haired prisoner in the nearest battery.

"Silence, dog!" roared a ferocious Arab, striking him savagely across the face.

That blow was an unlucky one for the striker. One swing of the iron bar with which the Englishman was working felled the Arab dead on the spot, and the next moment came a splash in the water, a shout from the flagship, and in a few minutes more the long-lost Tom Jackson was being hauled on board of her by his own son, amid a burst of cheering that seemed to split the very sky.

Half an hour later all was over. The pirate prince, as abjectly mean now as he had been boastfully insolent before, sent to beg for mercy, and to promise the surrender of all his prisoners.

The next morning Blake sailed out again with the rescued captives, leaving the defeated corsairs to recover their courage by slow degrees, and to bring down upon themselves by fresh misdeeds a still more terrible punishment. —Golden Days.

The claim of other cough medicines to be as good as Chamberlain's are effectually set at rest in the following testimonial of Mr. C. D. Glass, an employe of Bartlett & Dennis Co., Gardiner, Me. He says: 'I had kept adding to a cold and cough in the winter of 1897, trying every cough medicine I heard of without permanent help, until one day I was in the store of Mr. Houlehan and he advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and offered to pay back my money if I was not cured. My lungs and bronchial tubes were very sore at this time, but I was completely cured by this remedy, and have since always turned to it when I got a cold, and soon find relief. I also recommend it to my friends and am glad to say it is the best of all cough medicines." For sale by C. E. Holton.

GOOD FOR FARMING.

Alaska Affords Promising Outlook for the Agriculturist.

Prof. Georgeson, Special Agent of United States Agricultural Department, Says That Grains and Flax Grow Well There.

Prof. C. C. Georgeson, special agent of the United States agricultural department in charge of the experimental station in Alaska, at Sitka, has returned from the north for the purpose of making his annual report to the government. He has proved that Alaska will ultimately be as promising a field for agriculture and stock raising as it is now for mining. He was sent to the north in May, 1898, and his first work was to ascertain what could be produced there in the way of vegetables. He succeeded in raising choice barley and oats. Speaking of his experiments in Alaska, Prof. Georgeson said:

"There is not the slightest doubt that grain can be matured almost anywhere in Alaska. I have obtained this year samples of perfectly ripe barley, oats, wheat and rye from several points in the interior as far north as Eagle. These grains were grown and matured there this year. With one exception they were volunteer products from seed accidentally scattered and grown wild. If grains will grow and mature without culture, it stands to reason that they will grow and improve with culture.

"I also grew flax at Sitka the first year. It attained a height of more than three feet, matured seed and produced a fiber of excellent quality. There is no doubt that flax can be made a successful crop in the coast region of Alaska. My instructions the first year were to examine the coast region and reserve lands for experiment stations at suitable places. With this end in view we started a station at Kenai, on the Kenai peninsula, in Cook Inlet. We made a reservation of 320 acres there, some of which has been cleared and has matured grain successfully."

The Pope's Army.

The pope's army is but a small force nowadays, and when the whole contingent turned out for a review at the vatican recently there were but 300 all told. There are five divisions—the Guardia Mobile, 50 young aristocrats from stanchly clerical departments, 100 so-called Swiss guards, some of whom are Italian mountaineers; 100 apiece of the Guardia Palatina and the papal gendarmes and 30 firemen.

Experiments are being made on the Wannsee railroad between Berlin and Zehlendorf, Germany, to determine the precise value of electric propulsion as a substitute for steam. The train used consists of eight ordinary cars and is provided with an electric motor car at each end, the advantage of this arrangement being that the reversing of the train at terminals of the journey becomes unnecessary. Thus far the electric power has proved to be about 15 per cent. cheaper than steam power.

When you have no appetite, do not relish your food and feel dull after eating you may know that you need a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Price, 25 cents. Samples free at C. E. Holton's drug store.

A powerful engine cannot be run with a weak boiler, and we can't keep up the strain of an active life with a weak stomach; neither can we stop the human machine to make repairs. If the stomach cannot digest enough food to keep the body strong, such a preparation as Kodol Dyspepsia Cure should be used. It digests what you eat and it simply can't help but do you good. Howard Gardner.

HIS LIFE WAS SAVED.

Mr. J. E. Lilly, a prominent citizen of Hannibal, Mo., lately had a wonderful deliverance from death. In telling of it he says: "I was taken with typhoid fever that ran into pneumonia. My lungs became hardened. I was so weak I couldn't even sit up in bed. Nothing helped me. I expected to soon die of consumption, when I heard of Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle gave great relief. I continued to use it and now am well and strong. I can't say too much in its praise." This marvellous medicine is the surest and quickest cure in the world for all throat and lung trouble. Regular sizes 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottles free at C. E. Holton's drug

A WORD OF WARNING

When you buy a piano or organ you want a musical instrument do you not? Then beware of those cheap pianos and organs so extensively advertised. Use your own common sense. If a cheap watch could keep accurate time, there would be no demand for the full jeweled and adjusted movement. If a thirty dollar organ or a $150 piano could be constructed so as to give musical satisfaction and durability instead of being a source of discontent and annoyance, there would be no demand for a more artistic instrument.

Kimball Pianos and Organs are sold direct from their large factories at small factory profit. They are fully guaranteed. We shall be glad hear from any one desiring a strictly first-class instrument.

THREE ANGELS.

They say this life is barren, drear and cold,
Ever the same sad song was sung of old,
Ever the same long weary tale is told.
And to our lips is held the cup of strife,
And yet—a little love can sweeten life.

They say our hands may grasp but joys destroyed,
Youth has but dreams, and age an aching void,
Whose Dead sea fruit long, long ago has cloyed,
Whose night with wild tempestuous storms is rife—
And yet a little hope can brighten life.

They say we fling ourselves in wild despair
Amidst the broken treasures scattered there,
Where all is wrecked, where all once promised fair;
And stab ourselves with sorrow's two-edged knife,
And yet a little patience strengthens life.

Is it then true, this tale of bitter grief,
Of mortal anguish finding no relief?
Lo! midst the winter shines the laurel's leaf:
Three angels share the lot of human strife,
Three angels glorify the path of life.

Love, Hope and Patience cheer us on our way,
Love, Hope and Patience form our spirit's stay,
Love, Hope and Patience watch us day by day,
And bid the desert bloom with beauty vernal,
Until the earthly fades in the eternal.
—Temple Bar.

Mr. Oddie's Courtship.

By Sheela E. Braine.

MR. MARKHAM ODDIE was a model lodger, an old bachelor, and a heart-whole man. That is to say, he was all three until the day—considerably past his fortieth birthday—that a special fate took him in hand, and brought him face to face with the younger of two ladies who had recently come to live in one of the houses opposite.

They were evidently mother and daughter; both were comely and the last-named of the two had one of the sweetest faces it had ever been Mr. Oddie's luck to behold. She happened to drop a small parcel whilst walking along their mutual road, and he hurried after her with it. The smile with which she received it went straight through Mr. Oddie's somewhat antiquated waistcoat.

All the evening he thought of that smile. When he went to bed, he endeavored, with the aid of three candles, to get an impartial view of that region on the top of his head where the hair ought to have been, but now, alas, was not. That bald spot had not troubled him much up to that time; now he regarded it with mistrust.

Mr. Oddie had led an amiable, punctual, uneventful existence, going to and returning from the city every week day with regularity and dispatch—the kind of person who is never asked for his season ticket. He was comfortably off, and had no one dependent upon him; the few relatives he possessed lived in the shires.

Mr. Oddie had remained a bachelor all these years possibly because nobody had set to work to marry him. It was not that he objected to women; on the contrary, he admired the fair sex, as a whole, quite unreservedly. But he had never given his heart to any one particular woman, and his landlady looked upon him as a fixture.

The returning of that apparently innocent looking parcel marked an epoch. Life was never the same again to the little old bachelor. He had not watched Miss Hexham's gentle face and well-developed but graceful figure for ten days before he became convinced that it was not good for a corn dealer to live alone.

"A man wanted softening influences about him"—here he hurled a piece of fried ham to the cat—"he needed a gentle hand to guide and restrain him." Mr. Oddie at this point discovered that he had forgotten to wind his watch up the night before.

The truth was, he was in love, and with a young woman with whom he had never exchanged a syllable. He learned her name from his landlady, an austere person, whose mind was set upon a curious form of religion, and who did not take much thought about frivolous worldly matters.

Questioned discreetly by her lodger, this worthy but depressing person could tell him little regarding the two ladies who were now the object of such tender interest to him. They were a Mrs. and Miss Hexham, so she had heard, and Mrs. Hexham was either deaf or dumb, or it might be both, for her daughter talked on her fingers to her, and she answered back in the same way.

Mr. Oddie's courtship was a very decorous affair. In Spain, despite his years, he would doubtless have adopted the role of an "iron-eater," as the youth who goes courting under his lady-love's balcony is styled.

But in sober, unromantic England, the suitor does not eat iron, or serenade the queen of his heart on the guitar. He has to be properly introduced, and the little corn dealer, knowing this respectable custom, would have given anything for an introduction which would have allowed him to call and establish friendly relations.

The months passed, and still he could not get that thin but necessary end of the wedge in. The mother and daughter seemed to have very few friends, and never went out, probably on account of Mrs. Hexham's affliction. It was hard upon the daughter, Mr. Oddie thought, but he admired her all the more for her self-sacrifice.

Miss Hexham became aware of his devotion, of that Mr. Oddie was convinced. When they met—and he took care that they did meet pretty often—he ventured to raise his hat, and smiles were exchanged. But there the affair halted, to the poor little man's frequent despair. He could get no "forrader."

Once, when he attempted to speak, Miss Hexham turned the color of a red rose, and promptly hurried away.

"I have never been properly introduced, that is why," was Mr. Oddie's anguished reflection. "She must have been exquisitely brought up; the very pink of propriety."

"Something will have to be done." cried the poor man, desperately, on the day that he went to the city without a tie and an unfeeling acquaintance jeered at him and inquired if his liver were out of order. His liver! Perish the thought! It was his heart.

He decided at length that, like Hezekiah, he would ask for a sign from heaven. He would send the object of his adoration a bouquet, an anonymous bouquet of the choicest; she would surely guess from whom it came. If she placed it in the window he would write to Mrs. Hexham, explain himself and his intentions, and request permission to call.

Mr. Oddie took a holiday the day the bouquet was sent off from Covent garden; to sit still in his office was a thing impossible. He went for a long walk, but where his neat little legs took him he was never able to say.

The next day the agony increased; there was no sign. Mr. Oddie fell plump into the depths of despair, and was convinced that he had offended his lady-love. He had not been properly introduced; the phrase became a perfect nightmare to him.

But the second day there was the bouquet in the window in all its glory, and, moreover, Miss Hexham was bending over it, inhaling its perfume. She was a beautiful woman; not too young for a man—ahem—in his prime. The wonder was that such a treasure had not been snapped up before.

Markham Oddie wrote to Mrs. Hexham. It took him hours and hours to compose the letter, and it was the most deliciously old-fashioned epistle ever penned in a practical century. Two whole days elapsed before a little note came in reply:

"Mrs. Hexham presents her compliments to Mr. Markham Oddie, and would be pleased to see him, if he could make it convenient to call this evening between eight and nine o'clock."

The note was a formal one; but when the agitated little old bachelor was shown into the sitting-room at Holmwood, Mrs. Hexham, who was alone, received him with a very kindly smile. Her eyes looked as if she had been crying.

"Please take a seat," she said. "It has been very close all day, has it not?"

"Terribly," answered the visitor. "Do you feel the heat much?"

"Yes, I am afraid I do," was the reply, and Mr. Oddie suddenly recollected that his future mother-in-law was said to be deaf and dumb. This lady was certainly neither.

"My daughter," said Mrs. Hexham, after a pause, "desired me to tell you how very, very grateful she is to you for your letter and the flowers. She has gone away for a short time to stay with friends. She—she thought it best."

Mr. Oddie sat there, unable to utter a word. "She had gone away, because she thought it best." That meant that there was no hope for him.

Mrs. Hexham's eyes filled with tears as she looked at him. "Oh," she cried. "I am so sorry—so very sorry! You are such a good, kind-hearted man, I am sure. Of course, you did not know, or you would not have thought of it."

"Thought of what?" asked Mr. Oddie, heavily.

"Of marrying my poor Agatha. You did not know that she is deaf and dumb?"

Mr. Oddie stared at the speaker in blank amazement. It was fully a minute before he grasped the significance of what she was saying. It was the daughter, not the mother, who was "afflicted," as Mrs. Roper would have phrased it. He was silent, and Mrs. Hexham continued:

"My poor girl is over-sensitive, and your kindness went to her heart, I can assure you."

Mr. Oddie pulled himself together, and rose to his feet. At this moment there was something almost noble about his rather tubby little figure.

"Madam," he said, firmly, "your daughter is an angel, and I love her. Will you have the goodness to give me her address—that is, if you will sanction my asking her to do me the honor to be my wife?"

"It seems rather unconventional," she said: "but it is not exactly an ordinary case, is it? And I am sure you are a good man. Mr. Sedley, the vicar, was talking about you only the other day, and saying how charitable you were. Agatha has the sweetest disposition, and she is so quick you hardly realize that she is not like other people. indeed, I think you would be very happy together."

"I think we three would be very happy together," answered Mr. Oddie, emphasizing the "three." He took the widow's hand and kissed it with old-fashioned gallantry.

It is unnecessary to mention at what unearthly hour Mr. Oddie required his breakfast the next morning, or to state that he hardly ate a mouthful of it.

In the afternoon of the same day Mrs. Hexham might have been seen reading a telegram, with a beaming face. It was not a long one, for it contained only five words: "Love from Agatha and Markham."—Sketch.

Unintentional?

A London exquisite went into a West End restaurant and was far from pleased with the manner in which his order was filled. "Do you call that veal cutlet?" he demanded of the waiter. "Why, such a cutlet as that is an insult to every self-respecting calf in the British empire." The waiter hung his head for a moment, but recovered himself and said, in a tone of respectful apology: "I really didn't intend to insult you, sir."—Youth's Companion.

SAW MURDER IN DREAM.

Nebraska Arrest in the Fullhart Case as a Result of Description Furnished by Sister.

Indications are that a Nebraska fugitive murderer has been captured and will be brought to justice through a remarkable exhibition of mental telepathic interest existing between sister and brother. On the night of November 22 last W. H. Fullhart, a wealthy cattleman living near Broken Bow, Custer county, Neb., was murdered on his ranch. That night his sister, Phoebe Fullhart, living on a farm near Huntington, Ind., experienced a remarkable dream, in which she saw plainly every detail of her brother's murder and went through a bitter struggle with the murderer. She awoke in a perspiring condition and was nearly prostrated from a nervous weakness.

The crime in Nebraska was not discovered till two days later, when the sister received news of it. She at once forwarded a description of the man she had seen kill her brother in her dreams, and a suspected man tallied in appearance exactly with this description. He was arrested, and the sister has sent her attorney, J. S. Branyan, of Huntington, to assist in his prosecution. Miss Fullhart described exactly from her vision the wound in her brother's head and other minor details of the affair.

Building from the Top Down.

The newest fashion in New York skyscraper construction is to begin at the top and build downward. It seems impossible, yet that is what a contractor is doing with a bank building at Wall and William streets. At present the upper five floors, with granite walls, are practically finished. The lower ten are as yet mere skeleton of girders and trusses. The larger blocks of granite for these lower floors were not ready on time, so the builder decided to go ahead on the ones above. It is perfectly safe, yet the appearance of the structure is so unusual that it is a curiosity, even for Wall street.—Chicago Evening News.

WINS MISS FLAGLER.

Canadian Physician Succeeds in Overcoming Her Objections.

After Her Unfortunate Experience at Washington She Resolved Never to Wed—Her Work Among Cape Breton Fishermen.

Gen. and Mrs. D. W. Flagler announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Moore Flagler, to Dr. George W. McKeen, of Baddeck, Cape Breton, Canada.

Miss Flagler is the heroine of a painful incident and for five years she has lived in seclusion. In August, 1895, she attempted to scare some boys who were pilfering fruit from the family residential grounds on Columbia Heights. She discharged a pistol with such sure aim that a young colored boy was almost instantly killed.

Miss Flagler was duly indicted and tried for the occurrence, and a jury convicted her of homicide. Her sentence was that she serve one hour in the district jail and pay a fine of $500. She was taken to the jail and served the sentence of the court, although her father was prmitted to accompany her and while away the dreary hour.

Since that sad tragedy Miss Flagler has been a recluse from society, rarely appearing in public. She is of a very sensitive temperament, and grieved over the event to such an extent that at one time it was feared she was going into a decline. She has not cared to reside in Washington for any considerable period, and has made her home at Cape Breton, where she devoted her time and energy working among the poor fishermen's families.

It was there that she met Dr. McKeen, a physician of that locality. She was opposed to marriage, as she wished to spend her life in penitential expiation of her misfortune. It was only after the most ardent and patient wooing that she consented to the marriage, which will take place next June.

SEEK TO BAR NAME OF LEE.

The New York university senate, at its last meeting, received a protest from the Associated Survivors of the Sixth Army Corps of Washington against the name of Robert E. Lee appearing in the Hall of Fame. The protest is based on the ground that Lee being "an enemy to his country forfeited all right and title to honorable mention in such a class as it is proposed to include his name." In recording its action on the protest the senate says:

"During the month of October it was entirely within the power of this senate to reject the name of anyone approved by a majority of the judges, but with the expiration of that month the power of this senate to modify the list submitted by the 100 electors expired according to the fourth rule of the deed of gift to the Hall of Fame.

"It is fitting that we should add that no one of the senate moved the omission of the name of Robert E. Lee. The senate, therefore, agrees with the finding of that large majority of judges, more than two-thirds of whom inscribed his name. They respect these electors as men of highest patriotism, judicial temper, and thorough acquaintnce with all the important facts respecting Gen. Lee."

It is expected that this action of the senate will close the episode.

The designs for the twenty-nine tablets have been received and approved.

EMBARGO ON RATS.

Measures Adopted by the Health Board of Louisiana.

Regulations Governing the Unloading of Ships to Keep the Pest-Breeding Rodents from Landing—Fears of the Plague.

Ever since the dreaded bubonic plague made its appearance the cause of its spread and means to prevent infection from it has been the study of scientific men all over the world. One theory has been tolerably thoroughly established, and this is that the ordinary ship rat has been and is the chief factor in the spread of the infection, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

When the disease made its appearance in Honolulu, and while efforts were being made to stamp it out, this fact was recognized, and strict measures were employed to guard against the transfer of rats from ships which had touched at infected ports to the island.

Now the attention of the people of the United States is directed to the coast cities of Brazil, where the disease has been reported. Our close commercial relations with that country, particularly in the importation of great quantities of coffee, make an absolutely close quarantine against the ports almost an impossibility.

To devise and put in force a system of careful disinfection, the Louisiana state board of health has promulgated regulations governing the unloading of coffee ships from the suspected South American ports, which, almost from first to last, are aimed against the rat. The board proceeded, in framing the rules, on the theory that the rat family is the medium of infection from plague-stricken ports most to be feared, and these are the regulations which were evolved as a result of this theory:

Coffee ships from infected ports shall be thoroughly disinfected at the quarantine station and detained there five days, being disinfected on the fourth day. The vessel may then come to the city and anchor 100 feet from the wharf, it being calculated that a rat which tried to swim this distance would drown.

After daylight the vessel may be hauled in to within not less than 45 feet of her wharf by means of hawsers, each of which shall be provided with a system of metal funnels and disks, to prevent the passage of rats. These funnels must be of tin, zinc or galvanized iron, with a diameter of not less than 20 inches, and must have sharp serrated edges, and must be hinged, to permit of close adaptation to the hawsers. The metal disks must be of the same material, and must also be fitted with sharp edges. When within 45 feet of the wharf, the regulations provide that stagings shall be placed, across which the unloading must be done. While unloading is going on the regulations provide that "men with shotguns" shall watch the stagings and holds for rats, and shall kill all rats on sight. The man in charge must also "keep men with shotguns in skiffs on each side of the vessel," lest the unfortunate animals should attempt to escape by jumping overboard. Not later than sunset each day the hawsers must be hauled on board and the vessel draw off to her anchorage. The rules significantly state that "rubber gloves shall be used in handling dead rats," and that "dead rats shall be cremated."

The secretary of the board was busily engaged in seeing the agents of coffee ships and securing their acquiescence in the regulations. It is provided that all the expenses of the quarantine are to be borne by the vessel.

The rules are effective at once. Their publication caused a great deal of comment, especially the portions referring to rats, which caused as much laughter as criticism. The board says that the rat is the most dangerous factor in the spread of the plague, and that unless the rules are complied with the importation of coffee must stop.

On the day after the November election, when the daughters of Gov.-elect A. B. White, of West Virginia, sent their father a telegram congratulating him on his "red-headed way of winning," they probably were not aware that since West Virginia had become a state six of its nine governors had auburn locks. Such, however, is said to be the case. MacCorkle, who was the last democratic governor, and Mr. White, whose inauguration takes place on March 4, rank as the two most pronounced auburn-haired executives. — Cincinnati Enquirer.

Electricity has superseded steam as the motive power in ropemaking at the Charlestown (Mass.) navy yard, the change having been made very recently. It is the first time electricity has been used for this purpose, and the experiment will be watched with interest. The plant is the only one of the kind owned by the government, and nearly all the rope used in the service is made there.—N. Y. Tims.
